STATE ASSOCIATION PROGRAM OF WORK

By P. T. BROWN, Secretary,
Indiana Shorthorn Association

Any association must have a definite program of work if it expects to make worthwhile achievements. Our state association was organized in 1872 and will observe its 75th birthday in 1947. It has been more or less active during all these years. In order to increase the usefulness of the association, the directors have formulated a rather extensive program.

One of the first activities on this program is the sponsorship and support of 4-H beef calf club work. There are three things being done in regard to this project. First I will mention is the donation of a show halter annually for the club member that wins the Shorthorn Showmanship Contest at the state 4-H beef calf show. This activity has been carried on for several years.

The association sponsors each year the giving of a registered Shorthorn heifer to the boy or girl who has made an outstanding record as a feeder of Shorthorn calves. I should explain however, that the association does not purchase or present this heifer, but merely sponsors the whole thing by asking for donors and assisting in the selection of club members who are to receive the heifer. We have been very fortunate in having several breeders eager to make contributions from their herds for such a worthy cause.

The first heifer was presented in 1939. At that time four breeders entered into a voluntarily agreement among themselves, and with state association, to take turns in presenting one registered heifer during the ensuing four years. At the end of that four year period another group of four breeders entered into a similar agreement. Following is a list of these eight breeders and the names of the boys who have received these fine heifers up to this time:

1939—Eli Lilly (Conner Prairie) to Lain Tetrick, Greensburg, Ind.

1940—T. Dorsey Jones (Raveni) to Schuyler Van Voorst, Columbia City, Ind.

1941—Earl Robbins & John Whitehead (Robinwood) to Dale Lange, Greensburg.

1942—No state 4-H Beef Show held.

1943—J. K. White (Whitecroft) to Max Moore, Fortville.

1944—Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Sims (Eleona) to Dale Stone, Greensburg.

1945—R. L. Pierce & Oscar Jessup (Lawn View) to Jerald Grubbs, Connersville.

1946—Paul S. Chenoweth (Chenoweth Stock Farm). ..

1947—E. Arthur Ball (Broadfields).

The third 4-H club activity of the state association goes into effect this year (1946). It is an offer to give $500 to the owner of a Shorthorn steer that wins the Grand Championship in our State 4-H Beef Calf Show. This money has been donated by a group of breeders, and is to be used in purchasing foundation animals in an association sale.

Another worthwhile project which has required considerable time and effort is the publishing of a directory of Indiana Shorthorn Breeders. This project has been carefully planned by the members of the committee and the other directors. It is intended that this directory shall be revised at regular intervals so as to keep it up to date.

A very important activity of the state association is the sponsoring of the state sale. The directors have held numerous meetings to outline a sale policy that will be of greatest benefit to the breeders of Indiana, as a whole. The main points in the policy governing the Indiana State Sale as adopted and approved by the directors, are as follows: (1) The State Association's sale is to be a show window where the choicest individuals produced within the state are sold. This is contrary to the idea in the minds of many who believe that the state sale should help members dispose of any of their cattle regardless of quality. (2) All consignments are to be personally inspected by the manager or sale committee, who are required to reject any animals that do not measure up to the standards desired. (3) The sale cattle are to be exhibited and judged on the morning of the sale.

This policy regarding management of the state sale has been consistently adhered to. The result has been that the Indiana State Association Sale has risen to the leading position among sales of this kind throughout the United States.

When the directors formulated the above policy they realized that there was need for a place to sell more Shorthorns for our members than could be accepted for the State Sale. It was recognized that many farmers will not go very far from home to buy cattle but will patronize sales held near at hand. After discussing this whole question in several meetings, the directors decided to assist in the organization of district associations and encouraging them to hold district sales. As a result we now have (including the Eastern Indiana Association which was already an active association of long standing) five active district associations, holding sales at Centerville, Huntington, Greensburg, Washington and Greencastle. These associations all have their own officers, directors, and sale managers, and follow the same general policy as that governing the state association.

This recent development has given us a most complete and harmonious Shorthorn set-up in Indiana. It gives all breeders access to one or more active associations and sale. Many breeders including owners of our top herds, consign to not only the state sale but also the district sales. It has made for a unity of purpose and harmony in action and breed improvement that is rapidly putting Indiana to the forefront as a Shorthorn state.

The state association has a definite and important job to do in the improvement and advancement of Shorthorns in Indiana. The directors of the state association are very anxious to have on its membership list all breeders who are willing to help in this worthy cause.

Success in breeding primarily depends upon a balance between the hereditary level of excellence of the animal and the level of the environment under which it has to exist, produce and reproduce.

Constructive breeding consists of mating to produce certain characteristics and then of weeding out by careful selection those of the resultant progeny that do not show evidence that the desired results have been obtained or closely approached. It is by drastic selection that the breed advances generation after generation.

Prospective Stock Bull

Every prospective stock bull for use on purebred herds should be considered from three points of view. He should be appraised carefully as an individual. He should be considered as the representative of an improved ancestry. He should be considered the progenitor of improved offspring.

One Hundred Years Of Service To American Agriculture

By CLINTON K. TOMSON, Secy.
American Shorthorn Breeders' Association

1946 marks the completion of one hundred years Herd Book service by the oldest cattle registry association in the United States. It is appropriate that in commemorating this Centennial, we acknowledge the vision and foresight of the founders of the Herd Book, Lewis F. Allen and his nephew Grover Cleveland, who later became president of the United States. To these names should be added the ever-increasing list of pioneer Shorthorn breeders upon whose efforts was established the foundation of our present day cattle industry, the biggest single peace-time industry in our country, which grosses an annual income between 4½ and 5 billions of dollars, forming the most important cog in our vast and unparalleled agricultural system. It was with Shorthorn blood that these early pioneers on farm and range worked improvement on the early cattle of Spanish origin which preceded them. With the pioneers, across the plains and to the West Coast went Shorthorn cattle, supplying the necessary beef and milk to foster and further this new civilization. The monumental industry created through the efforts of these breeders as a result of improving Shorthorn blood is a permanent and lasting one. Today, one hundred years later, it represents a tribute to their efforts.

Indiana can be justly proud of the contribution to Shorthorn cattle improvement which has been made by the hundreds of prominent breeders that have raised Shorthorns during this first century. As a result of this coordinated effort on the part of Indiana breeders as well as breeders from other states, Shorthorns have become a universal cattle. They are to be found in more countries and climates than any other breed. Because of the inherent characteristics which combine to make up their versatile performance, Shorthorn producers have been able to operate profitably under extremely varied and adverse climatic environment. This worldwide popularity is reserved and today in the United States our leading breeders are keeping pace by offering cattle backed by generations of dependable constructive efforts yet tempered by modern demands for earlier maturity and greater quality. Our modern breeders through intelligent selection have succeeded in developing a uniform type that is popular because they have not sacrificed qualities that have become synonymous with the name, "Shorthorn." These qualities—weight for age, milk and beef, gentle dispositions—are to be found almost exclusively in our breed and are vital factors in profitable cattle production.

If we must look for proof of the popularity of cattle registered with the American Shorthorn Breeders' Association, it can best be substantiated by statistical facts supporting the most recent progress of our breed. During the past five year period nearly eight thousand new breeders have become members of our Association, recording by far the largest increase in membership, either numerically or percentage-wise of any beef breed Association. During the past year a new record for any breed of 1,904 new members enrolled with this Association. We can point to increased registrations and transfers of animals to new owners. During the past year 82 per cent of our total registrations were represented by transfers of breeding animals. In interbreed competition, we can point with pride to the triumph of Tomahawk, the sensational Shorthorn steer, called by many competent judges the best steer ever to win at Chicago that won over the largest showing of individual steers ever held in this country. The fact that he established a new world's record price further attest to his popularity. We can point to triumph at Denver where a carload of inker Shorthorn feeders steers were declared grand champions over all breeds and also established a new world's record price for the ruggedness, extra substance, and extra milk-producing characteristics resulting from Shorthorn sires of our western commercial cattlemen, the backbone of the industry.

We appreciate the co-operation of our Indiana breeders in helping to widen the field for breed expansion. It should be gratifying to those men, whose faith and confidence in the future of Shorthorns have kept them on the job through years of depression, drouth and economic failure, to observe the fulfillment of their highest ambitions as manifested by the increased patronage and popularity of Shorthorns. The recent sensational records are a demonstration of direct results of the co-operative efforts of every Shorthorn breeder to improve his own herd.

We can well be proud of the first one hundred years and make of the next one hundred years a record of exacting relationship to aggressive and co-operative effort along identical lines so necessary to breed promotion.

Inbreeding results in improvement or deterioration depending entirely on the genes present in the related animals. Only those breeders whose herds are fairly large and of more than average merit should practice closebreeding. Linebreeding should have a greater vogue than it has had in the past.

Inbreeding will be successful (1) if the good genes pretty well outnumber the bad ones to start with, (2) if the breeder has more than average skill in planning his matings, (3) if the breeder can and will practice very rigid selection. Finally, it isn't the system of matings—it's the genes in the animals and the intelligence in the man, and the latter is also largely a matter of genes.

I have had men tell me, in all seriousness, that they would not buy a bull belonging to a certain family, because bulls of that family were not satisfactory sires. They had based this conclusion upon very limited experience, and overlooked the fact that individuals within the same family might differ more widely than those bearing different family names. Of course, it all depends upon the line of breeding followed in the herds from which the cattle come.

Success in the beef cattle business rests on two foundations. One is business judgment, the other is cattle knowledge. Business judgment in cattle production is about the same as in any other enterprise. It has to be acquired in the school of experience, and we all must pay our own tuition.

A good well-bred young Short-horn cow with calf by a proved sire and bred back is anyone's best buy. For the 4-H Club boy with some cattle experience, and a lot of love for livestock and farming, it may mean the founding of a life's business.

The Good Ones Develop

Judges of breeding animals often are criticized for placing younger animals of superior quality above older ones that have weaknesses which the critics may be less serious than those that might be developed by the winners. Buyers of prospective herd sires likewise are criticized frequently for making their selections before calves have developed and while, as it is pointed out, they still possess their milk fat.

Many impelling reasons exist for this practice by experienced breeders but explanations can be summed up logically in the statement that it is the result of supply and demand. The supply of great sires is inadequate as is that of prospects which show promise of becoming top herd bulls. Breeders looking for herd sires are unwilling to risk loss of the opportunity to acquire one when convinced that they have found an individual of the type, conformation, character and breeding they need.

The capable judge of breeding animals is able to make a selection at a relatively early stage of the animals' growth, especially when superiority is backed by ancestry of the required conformation and character. The breeder's experience has taught him that good well-bred calves develop into good mature animals with proper management. He knows that the individual is the best evidence, aside from progeny, of the animal's ability to perpetuate the desired qualities of its ancestry.

How do we measure the value of breeding animals? By their progeny, of course. There is a wide spread in the value of ordinary, good, and excellent breeding animals. Enthusiasts frequently pay large sums for prospective sires and matrons, those that they think will attain the excellent class. The true value of a sire or a matron cannot be known until his or her progeny have arrived and can be studied.

Value of a Good Bull

What can a breeder afford to pay for a good bull? This question arises constantly and is one that has perplexed too many cattlemen. The question that confounds even the wisest producer of purebred cattle at times is where he can obtain the right bull to make needed herd improvements or to maintain the quality that he already has bred into his herd.

Fortunately in Shorthorns there are strains that are practically one hundred per cent able to improve the average quality of the top herds of the breed while maintaining the excellence of the extreme tops in these herds. It is particularly fortunate that in the Shorthorn breed such strains are sufficiently numerous and prolific to provide herd size not only for a few top herds but at nominal cost for any breeder having the vision and courage to do constructive cattle breeding.

The noblest mof leading is to maintain superiority in type, quality, character, rapid maturity, weight for age—those characteristics that identify Shorthorns as the world's most useful breed of cattle—not above other breeds but a supremacy within the breed.

This extreme top price which a breeder can afford to pay for the right bull probably never is paid, though sometimes the cost of a wrong size in lost profits and depreciated herd values eventually has spelled financial ruin. There are many Shorthorn sizes today, computation of the value of which in their lifetime is impossible. Shorthorn history is replete with sizes that have been of inestimable worth to their owners and to the cattle industry.

Uniformity in any class of livestock is pleasing to the eye and is a significant measure of the breeding and management practices that have attained such result.

INDIANA AND SHORTHORNS

By WILL JOHNSON
Editor Shorthorn World

Good herds of Shorthorns are typical of Indiana rural life, just as are good roads, rich farm lands, comfortable homes, district schools and quiet peaceful places of worship. Each of its ninety-two counties has a thriving village or city for its county seat and the intervening spaces are adorned with green fields and running brooks. That was Indiana when I knew it as a boy and that is what I see when I return from time to time.

Shorthorns have been Indiana's most popular cattle for more than a century. Among the earliest cattle of any breed to come into the state were a Shorthorn bull and two cows brought from England for Christopher Whitehead of Franklin county in 1838. In 1853, A. C. Stevenson, of Greencastle, imported two young bulls and four heifers. He lived to a ripe old age and was the state's leading Shorthorn apostle until his death.

Sol Meredith of Wayne county exerted an early influence upon the breed as he did upon agriculture in general. When a boy in his teens he walked from North Carolina and chopped wood for $6.00 per month. In 1836 he bought his first Shorthorns and from that time he had no peer in the realm of agriculture during his life.

Thomas Wilhoit of Henry county began with Shorthorns in 1851 eventually owning one of the best herds in the county. J. M. Woodruff of Johnson county helped to introduce the breed into Indiana and, during the Civil War, the famous Woodburn herd of R. A. Alexander of Kentucky was entrusted to him for safekeeping.

Another of the early Indiana breeders and one of the best known and most popular was Hon. S. F. Lockridge of Greencastle. He was one of the members of the first board of directors of the Shorthorn Association and his herd was nationally famous. All of these have passed on and their herds have been discontinued.

In 1821 William Robbins came to Decatur county from Virginia. In 1880 his son, James G. Robbins, and his sons, William and John E., began to establish a herd that has been and still is one of the foremost breeding establishments on the continent. It is now known as Robinwood and is operated upon two farms, one at Greensburg under the direct supervision of Will's son, Earl E. Robbins and one at Waldron managed by Earl's son-in-law, John Whitehead.

It was at about the turn of the century that the writer became acquainted with the Robbins family and with this peerless herd. At that time the herd was represented at the nation's largest shows by exhibits of Shorthorns that contained more grand champions than all of their competitors combined. From that day to this the herd has continued in the ascendancy and no other herd has contained as many famous Shorthorns. There is not space in this brief review to recount all of National, International and state championships won by Robbins' or Robinwood Shorthorns. The following names will remind all readers of Shorthorn history of the many contests wherein victory was won by the firm of J. G. Robbins and Sons which came in later years to be known as Robinwood: Gay Monarch, St. Valentine, The Lad For Me, Choice Goods, Collynie Chief 2d, Merry Chimes, Robinwood Villager, Lavender Stamp, Raveni Masterpiece, Phingask Bank Roll, Brawith Bugler, and Robinwood Royal Leader, all champions or sires of champions or of first prize gets-of-sire. And among females were many equally as renowned: Gay Mary, Ruberta, Rosie

O'Grady, Sassie Frantic, Cicely, Lad's Emma, Lad's Goldie, Clarissa, Raveni Princess 2d, Robinwood Spicy 6th, Robinwood Secret 8th, Robinwood Sultana and numerous others making a list equally as impressive as the bulls.

One such herd as Robinwood is enough to make any state rank among the leaders but, Indiana would be a leading Shorthorn state even without this great herd.

Every section of Indiana has herds of which any state would be proud. T. Dorsey Jones has brought fame to Indiana with his herd bulls Browndale Star and Browndale Pilot, the use of which established the famous "Perfect Nick." His Raveni farm produced more than one international champion including Raveni Masterpiece and Raveni Leader that, in turn, sired famous cattle in other herds. Broadfields' noted herd near Muncie is now one of America's choicest collections. William A. Allison's Sons have made a noteworthy contribution to Shorthorns in the southwest as has the Henry Duplan herd in the northwest. Clyde G. Harlow has succeeded his father, the late J. R. Harlow of Tipton who established a herd fifty years ago that is still one of Indiana's substantial institutions. Conner Prairie Farm built a grand aggregation of Shorthorns which it has turned over to Purdue University.

Many others would be discussed in detail if space permitted. M. V. Bookout, Losantville; Raphoe Farms, owned by descendants of W. T. Miller, one of Indiana's early breeders of excellent Shorthorns; Steinmetz Bros., Fowler; E. E. Beals, Cicero; Morton G. Kimmel, Kimmel; Harry McCabe, Green-castle; Fred Belles, Judson; R. H. Lumpkin and Sons, Losantville; Lyons Bros., Morland; H. M. Sourbeer, Pershing; R. R. Brennan, Kendallville; Floyd Stevens, Sidney; Sherman Crowl, Yoder; and a dozen others have been breeding good Shorthorns for twenty-five years or more and have found the industry to be profitable and pleasant.

During World War I and in the boom days following a number of herds sprang up throughout the state, many of them attaining prominence but as these now have been discontinued and as space is limited, they will not be discussed here.

Among newer breeders who are attaining prominence are G. A. Richey and Sons, Indianapolis; Pierce and Jessop, Indianapolis; M. W. Woody, Greentown; A. J. McAllister, Lafayette; Hollis Hanson, Connersville; Walter and Vanna Thrasher, Bloomington; Fluard and Florin Meyers, Plainsville; Jerome Gillooly, Washington; Clyde Goodman, Winchester, Cooper Farms, Auer; and a score or more of others.

E. E. Souers, now of Columbia City but then living at Warren was one of Indiana's leading breeders and exhibitors nearly fifty years ago, breeding, importing and showing champions. About 1916 he retired from the industry but he never lost his love for a good Shorthorn. A few years ago he started to build another herd and, in view of the progress that he has made it is safe to predict that soon he will be listed among the nation's most prominent breeders.

C. M. Vandenberg of Park county was one of the prominent men of the industry forty years ago. While he has passed the age of greatest activity, his sons and grandsons are carrying on with good Shorthorn cattle. The Vandenberg family is one of many in Indiana wherein sons and grandsons continue herds of founders.

One of the greatest factors that contribute to the success of Indiana Shorthorns is the co-operative spirit among its breeders. Seventy-five years ago the Indiana Shorthorn Breeders' Association was formed and it has operated almost continuously ever since and, at the present time, it is as active as at any other era since it was formed. From time to time there have been county or district associations that have been influential in furthering the cause of the breed at present there are a dozen such organizations scattered throughout the state and every one of them is under good leadership and functions to advantage.

Cattle and equipment are only a small part of the advantage that Purdue has been to the Shorthorn industry. Its principal aide has come from the influence of the members of its staff, individually and collectively.

Purdue's animal husbandry department and its extension force has been and is composed of energetic, capable, progressive men, men with tact and courage, men who lead and with whom farmers and breeders enjoy working and whose opinions they respect and whose precepts they are willing to follow. Yes, Purdue furnishes real leadership and is one of the strongest factors in Indiana's success as a livestock state. Indiana ranks among the highest of the states in the quality as well as in the numbers of its Shorthorns.

HEIFER GIVEN IN APPRECIATION OF WORK OF P. T. BROWN

Last year the officers of the Indiana Shorthorn Breeders Association, acting on an idea advanced by President John A. Whitehead, set out to find a gift that would convey the deep appreciation of breeders for the outstanding work of the secretary of our Association, P. T. Brown.

Response to the idea was instantaneous and there was soon more than enough money—contributed by 145 individuals—to purchase the fine heifer pictured above, which was made available to the Association at a reasonable price through the generosity of Purdue university.

Her breeding and conformation make her a gift worthy of the man who has labored long and tirelessly for the improvement of the breed and the advancement of the Association.

Shorthorns World Leaders

Highest Total Price for a Single Steer—A SHORTHORN

Highest Total Paid for a Beef Bull—A SHORTHORN

Highest Total Paid per Feeder Steer Gr. Ch. Feeder Calves 1946
Denver National—SHORTHORNS

Today the membership of the American Shorthorn Breeders' Association leads all beef breeds. The end of the first century of Shorthorn Herd Book service (1846-1946) is crowned with three world price records which have been recorded to the great credit of Shorthorns in the three consecutive months, December, 1945, January and February, 1946. In December—a Shorthorn brought the highest total price paid for a single steer. In January—Shorthorns brought the highest total ever paid for feeder calves. In February—a Shorthorn brought the highest total paid for a beef bull of any breed. These are the answers to the painstaking efforts of a century of effort by breeders past and present who have believed in the enriching influence to American agriculture of recording bloodlines of known performance.

Shorthorns always have been the world's greatest improvers of cattle strains. They are still the fountain source to which cattlemen return for renewing vigor, scale, ruggedness and milking ability in their herds.

Today Shorthorns give more beef and milk in return for their board and keep than any other breed. From calfhood to maturity they are dividend payers. You can make them into world record price feeder calves or carry them through to market topping beef with maximum results.

Write today for folder SHORTHORNS BEST IN EVERY WEIGH depicting these three world records in detail, also for new booklet SECURITY WITH SHORTHORNS, and other helpful mailing pieces to send to your prospective buyers. LET'S KEEP SHORTHORNS ON THE MARCH.
